Shihan Wang

names September 2009 as the "beginning of violin-learning". The eleven year old violinist was born in Beijing and has been taught for 3 years by Prof. Wang Hong at the Central Conservatory of Music in his home town. In 2014 and 2015 he took part in the international Qingdao master classes as a violinist and was chosen for participation in the final concert because of his special accomplishments. Another international master class for strings in 2015 led him for the first time to Europe - to the monastery Schöntal in Austria. There he took part in the 16th international competition for violin and was awarded 2nd prize as well as a special award for the best interpretation of baroque works. This year the young violinist has travelled to Taiwan and performed at the Yilan violin festival. In June Shihan Wang was invited to participate in the opening concert of the Singapore Violin Festival where he was awarded with the Rising Star Prize. In July 2016 he performed in London and won the 1st Prize of the London Bridge Music Academy.

Hana Chang

already at the age of 7 stood on the stage as a soloist alongside the New England Conservatory Baroque Chamber Orchestra. After this, performances with the Lexington Symphony, the Concord Orchestra, the Wellesley Symphony Orchestra and the New England Conservatory Youth Repertoire Orchestra followed. The foundation behind these early successes was laid by violin teachers such as Prof. Yuri Mazurkevich at the Boston University as well as Miguel Perez-Espejo Cardenas and Klaudia Szlachta. Hana Chang currently studies at the Cleveland Institute of Music in the Junior Young Artist Program in the class of Prof. Ivan Ženatý. Hana has already been successful in many youth competitions in her homeland including 1st prize in the Stradivarius International Violin Competition in July 2016, and will be performing with the Utah Symphony and the China Hunan Symphony Orchestra in 2017. Masterclasses have led her to James Ehnes and Zakhar Bron.
